CAUCUS ON SOCIAL THEORY & ART EDUCATION

BULLETIN NUMBER 3
BULLETIN NUMBER 3 continues the lively exchange of ideas, information, and views about the relationship among art, social and cultural values, and education. The assembled authors provide us with thought-provoking articles on modern art, educational ideology, and curriculum; with vigorous arguments from differing sides of the "elitism versus populism" debate; with socially-oriented reviews of major art education texts; and with an annotated bibliography of relevant study resources.

Publication support for this issue has been provided by James Madison University's School of Fine Arts and Communication, Donald L. McConkey, Dean. Special thanks go to Constance Lowe, University of Illinois, for editorial assistance.
