

Board rescinds ban on fraternities

After a good deal of shouting and debating, fraternities and sororities quietly became a part of VCU January following an affirmative vote by the Board of Visitors called specifically to vote on the matter.

Eleven organization members of the Interfraternal Council were recognized as charter members.

The board in approving the reversal of its former decision in 1964 said: The Board of Visitors of VCU approves and gives consent to the establishment of social fraternities and sororities at VCU nationally oriented or locally established on campus pursuant to such rules as made that are approved from time to time by the administration.

Bill Oliver, president of the council, and the seven officers of the organizations appeared before the board and gave brief arguments favoring the acceptance of fraternities and sororities on campus. SGA president Randy Eley also spoke.

The ban was lifted after two years of campaigning on the part of individual organizations, support of the SGA and recommendations of an ad hoc committee formed to investigate the proposal, and formulate regulations to govern the fraternities and sororities on the academic campus.

Dr. R. I. Wilson, vice president of student affairs, was named to a supervisory position by the board under a recommendation in the ad hoc committee's proposed regulation. He will also serve in a capacity to hear appeals by those students who feel they have not been treated fairly during rushing.

Dr. Wilson will, under an Assembly proposal, delegate much of his authority to a group which may be a subgroup of a subcommittee of the University Assembly.

The history leading up to the board's affirmative vote began in earnest in October 1968. Petitions were circulated stating there were too few clubs on campus. At the first strategy meeting, SGA President John Norcutt voiced his support of the movement if it could be proven that the student body wanted fraternities and sororities. He made it clear that he was not taking the action to show his approval, saying, "I personally will never establish a fraternity on campus. Once you get started, we (SGA) will support you."

On March 3, 1969, the House passed a motion to ask the Board of Visitors to rescind its ban.

Dean Charles M. Renneisen, dean of students, voiced approval of returning fraternities and sororities to the campus. "My feelings are that as long as they don't violate the rights of others, they should be able to form any organization they want."

"Pseudo-fraternities have a positive image with him. What they have thus far done has been good for the campus."

Jenkins elected Speaker

Butch Jenkins, a junior history major from Lancaster, has been elected Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Student Government Association (SGA).

Jenkins was elected by a vote of 13 to 11 over the only other nominee, Bill Patterson, Bus3 Richmond. The special election of House Speaker was held after the resignation of Fred Shorter, Dis3 Richmond, three weeks ago.

In other House action Monday night, Delmar Dayton, chairman of the Board of Elections, announced that his committee has recommended March 3 as the date for a special election to fill the 16 vacancies in the House. Dayton said class elections could also be held on this date. March 19 has been recommended for SGA elections for next year.

No action was taken on this or any other proposal since the House meeting was adjourned suddenly when it was learned that a class was to meet in the House meeting room, due to scheduling conflicts.

A topic of lengthy discussion at the meeting Monday night concerned a budget committee recommendation of a 50 per cent cut in an allocation requested by the Interdorm Council.

Sam Wilcox, SGA treasurer, reported that the council had asked several weeks ago for an allocation of $2,255 to allow 10 council members to attend the National Association of Colleges and University Residence Hall Convention in Lubbock, Texas. Wilcox said the committee recommends the allocation of $1,127.50 for this purpose. This would be enough to send five members to the convention, or pay half the expenses for 10.

Mary Margaret Frank, president of the Interdorm Council, answered questions from members about the requested allocation. She said, "there will be approximately 800 to 1,000 students at Texas Tech (for the convention). With that ratio," she continued, "we felt 10 would be a fairly representative number to go and make themselves known."

Speaking for the committee, Wilcox said he felt the conference was important but "you can't put the importance of one event over the importance of the whole Student Government Association."

Cobblestone sets final deadline

The final deadline is today for organizations wanting their group pictures in the 1970 yearbook, the Cobblestone. According to Pat Blake, yearbook editor, campus organizations have been lax in making appointments for pictures and the deadline can be no longer put off.

Appointments can be made through Pat at extension 6974 between 2 p.m. and 4:30.

Brandt to address budget committee

By Warren Morgan

Dr. Brandt is to meet with a General Assembly committee Friday to describe the university's 1970-72 budget requests, already trimmed down from $52 million to $33 million.

Gov. Linwood Holton has sent out a letter to all state-supported institutions requesting that they further cut their requests. VCU late last year had submitted to Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. requests for $52 million. Godwin cut the sum to $33 million.

In a letter to the university faculty members, Dr. Brandt said the university had been treated "comparatively well" in the general funds budget recommended to the legislature by the former governor. This view has been seconded by Raymond T. Holmes, VCU vice-president of finance.

The total budget request for 1970-72 was $77 million. But $52.76 million was requested from the general state fund (taxes) and the rest are special funds coming from tuition, grants, federal monies, etc. It was the $52.76 million that was cut by Godwin to $33 million.

The requested total increase for VCU is 53 per cent, contrasted to 21 per cent for the College of William and Mary, 42 per cent for the University of Virginia and 51 per cent for Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The budget proposed by the university is twice that of the previous biennium. According to Dr. Brandt's letter, it was based on below normal staffing and funding standards.

Of the request, 66 per cent would go for teaching and research salaries, 20 per cent for other salaries and wages and 14 per cent for other expenses (lights, heat, library supplies, etc.). "This increases the percentage of state funds which the university is receiving over the percentage we previously received as RPI," Holmes said. "In the 1968-70 budget, the request for teaching and research salaries was 64.8 per cent, the new request is for 66.34 per cent."

Dr. Brandt feels the increase would permit improvement of the teaching environment, even though the growth would not be as great as had been anticipated. "We are mature enough to recognize the pinch brought about by all the programs that need to be done in

MCV receives $7.6 million in US grants

Applications for federal grants totaling more than $7.6 million have been approved for two projects at the Medical Center by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

One of the projects is a 15-floor addition to Sanger Hall the medical education building. The addition with 12 floors above ground and three below will house the anatomy, physiology, micro-biology, biochemistry and biometry departments.

The federal government awarded $6,354,002 for Sanger Hall which was matched with $3.3 million by the state from general obligation bonds.

The other project is an extension of the Tompkins-McCaw Library, and modernization of present facilities. The federal government approved $1,294,720 for the addition which was matched by approximately $705,000 by the state.

Current plans have the working drawings and specifications for the Sanger Hall addition scheduled for completion by the end of this year. Construction is to begin in 1971 and will be completed January 1973.

The present library contains 14,500 sq. ft. of space, and will be enlarged to 52,000 sq. ft.

Art center named for former teacher

By Janet Hawkins

The new art studio building will be named for Miss Theresa Pollak, Professor Emerita, and the first faculty member of the School of the Arts.

The Board of Visitors authorized the previously recommended naming of the $3,000,000 structure now under construction on Harrison Street between Franklin Street and Park Avenue. Expected to be completed in early 1971, the building will provide 27 studios, offices for faculty and exhibit space on the first floor.

The announcement that the new building would be named for Miss Pollak came from University officials on January 12, at an exhibition of the School of Arts held at the Carillon.

Miss Pollak retired from active teaching in 1969, after 40 years of service at VCU. She was instrumental in founding the School of Art at the former Richmond Professional Institute which began with Miss Pollak's first studio class of 20 students in 1928. For many years Miss Pollak acted as the School's director, and upon her retirement she held senior rank among all professors at the Academic Center.

Miss Pollak was graduated from Westhampton College in 1921, and in 1941 she was elected to the Epsilon

Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Richmond. In 1964, she was a recipient of a Distinguished Alumnae Award of Westhampton College.

She studied with the Art Student's League of New York City from 1921 to 1923. She has also worked under a Tiffany Foundation Fellowship at Harvard University's Fogg Museum under a Carnegie Fellowship, with the Steiger Paint Group of Edgartown, Mass. and the Hans Hofmann School of Painting in Provincetown, Mass.

Miss Pollak has exhibited her works at least once annually since 1926, both in Virginia, and nationally. Her paintings are represented in permanent museum collections across the nation.

In 1968, she wrote a history of the School of the Arts at VCU entitled, "An Art School -- Some Reminiscences".

Miss Pollak's reaction to the naming of the art studio building was, "I think this is a wonderful thing for the institution to have done while I'm living, rather than at a later time. Now, I'm able to feel a deep satisfaction, and a feeling of recognition. All I've really done is to work hard, and to have an intensive interest in the School of Art and its students."

The ratings race

VCU has finally scored in the ratings race. This university has rated higher than any other college or university in Virginia in recommended allocations in Virginia's 1970-72 budget. Although the amount requested, $52 million, was trimmed to $33 million by the governor, the allocation is an increase of 53 per cent over last year.

This contrasts with 51 per cent for Virginia Polytechnic Institute, 42 per cent for the University of Virginia and 21 per cent for the College of William and Mary.

Despite this apparent "win" by VCU, however, the cut in appropriation will result in some setbacks from what had been originally planned had the $52 million been approved. President Brandt told faculty members in a letter that had the school received the full $52 million it would have been able to advance faculty salaries significantly. Still, the president said, "We shall be able to advance faculty salaries—probably providing progress above the national average."

The revised budget will allow VCU to receive money to complete the Science Building and the Health Sciences Division will receive more than $19 million. Items not included in the budget are funds for a library extension, land extension, $21 million for classrooms, and money for a graduate chemistry and psychology building.

The university will be allowed to seek bond sales for two dormitories, a parking deck and student center. It is good to see progress made on especially these last two items. It has been a year since students voted ready to tax themselves for these items if the state could not provide them.

From the list of items we will have and items we will not have, it appears that VCU has once again come out behind. Actually, however, there is hope. Since the governor put VCU at the head of the list of colleges and universities percentage-wise, it appears that maybe the state realizes at last the value of the two institutions which form VCU.

With a great deal of patience, we can endure the setbacks and delays, in the hope that construction on this campus will never cease.

A shallow victory

Fraternities have come to the cobblestone campus. We use the archaic term to describe VCU because we believe fraternities and what they stand for are archaic and old hat. But then, we've said that before, and still the fraternities have come.

Final approval came when the Board of Visitors agreed to rescind the ban on fraternities and sororities after the University Assembly recommended that the ban be lifted.

Once again we commend the students who worked so hard for this goal. They have won a shallow victory, but since we are in favor of student achievement, we applaud their efforts. What a shame the goal had to be something that is going out on campuses like this one.

For those students who have time for cliques and clannish club activities, we say congratulations, you have what you wanted.

For those who think of a university as a place to learn and experience maturely and responsibly, we say continue with your present activities and try to ignore the rating and childish games the fraternities and sororities will indulge in.

To those we've made angry by our denouncement, we challenge you to prove us wrong.

Quote of the day

"...There are responsibilities that must be met—jobs that must be done if we are to insure a meaningful voice in the governance of our university."

Newly Elected Speaker of the House

A new look

The new college catalogue has a new look. Although it has appeared late in the year, we notice that it will be in effect for one and one half years, an innovation.

Too, pictures have been added to spruce up the dull reading inside. Course requirements in many areas have become tougher, and new required courses have been added.

We would like to request a clarification on two issues. First, is this catalogue retroactive to September?

And second, if a student enters the university when one catalogue is in effect, must he meet the subsequent added requirements as the catalogue changes? Some advisors say students must take the new courses; some assure them they won't have to and then spring them on them in their last years in school.

A clarified statement should be issued to instructors detailing these policies. Then we would like the word passed on to us.

Mr. Speaker, speak to us!

We congratulate Butch Jenkins on his election as Speaker of the House of Representatives. At the same time, we offer condolences to an equally qualified candidate, Bill Patterson, who was defeated by a narrow margin.

We have only one request to make of the new speaker: Speak to us!

It is time that the Speaker of the House become a speaker for the student body. As outgoing speaker Fred Shorter pointed out at Monday night's House meeting, the position of House speaker has taken on added importance during the last few years. And now the speaker has membership on the University Assembly, an extremely important post since student membership is so limited.

Jenkins appears to be well qualified for the position. An experienced campaigner, having worked for Gov. Linwood Holton during the 1969 gubernatorial campaign, Jenkins has worked as executive coordinator to SGA President Randy Eley and as coordinator for the Virginia Association of Student Governments.

He has been a member of the House, parliamentarian of the SGA Senate and secretary of the constitutional convention.

In his address to the House Monday night, Jenkins made several proposals to improve the role of the House. One proposal calls for the establishment of joint committees of student affairs with faculty and student members. He also suggested the instigation of a House newsletter to be published at least monthly, and the establishment of the office of Clerk of the House.

So Jenkins is thinking of ways to improve the House. His main thrust, he said, will be to return action to the House, a body which has been called inactive and apathetic in the past.

Butch Jenkins could be the answer to the House's dilemma. He is a politician, it is true, but he has not yet practiced his politics on this campus. He is not a member of the old regime.

Speaking of the old regime, Fred Shorter made an eloquent speech in behalf of Bill Patterson prior to the vote. Shorter praised, rightly we feel, Patterson's work for student representation on the University Assembly, and asked for his election. The very House which used to respond to Shorter's every whim denied him this last wish.

It appears that with former SGA President John Norcutt replaced and Fred Shorter now out, a new breed of student leaders is emerging. We are glad to see this. It looks like progress. We ask only that the new leaders remember those who elected them.

Speak to us!

Et tu, Brutus

Brutus, the 140-pound Great Dane, who toured the VCU campus last semester with his master Pat Colligan, has died of pneumonia.

The dane, who, according to Colligan, was the kindest, gentlest dog in the world, had an unkind history. When Brutus adopted his present master, he was suffering from tapeworm and was underweight.

Colligan said that Brutus loved people and was loved by many students here.

"Brutus was the kindest dog in the world, so he became extremely upset when he suspected that someone was afraid of him," Colligan noted.

Brutus was banned from the campus last semester after an accusation that he had attacked other dogs here. However, nothing materialized from the controversy and Brutus was quietly welcomed back.

Colligan said that he plans to obtain another Great Dane whose name is Hamlet.

ODU, Loyola drub Rams

By Fred Jeter

The Rams carried their victory string to six games January 10 with a relatively easy 110-78 romp over Southeastern of Washington, D.C.

The visitors got off to a miserable start and the Rams led 15-1 before a full court press turned the game momentarily around. VCU threw pass after pass away and Southeastern staged an almost unbelievable comeback to lead 23-22. The Rams finally broke the press and rolled to a 50-35 halftime spread.

The second half was fully dominated by VCU whose lightning fast break attack was simply too much for the slower Southeasterners. Jabo Wilkins was spectacular throughout the game and ended with a season high 38 points and 28 rebounds. He got some strong help underneath from muscular Mike Fling who got 12 rebounds and equally muscular Charley Chambliss who grabbed 11. Charlie Booker missed the game due to a shoulder injury.

Old Dominion 94, VCU 90

All good things must come to an end and the Old Dominion Monarchs ended the Rams six game winning streak by a 94-90 count in January 21 encounter at Norfolk.

The Monarchs benefitted from some splendid second half shooting and the foul problems of Jabo Wilkins to overcome a 48-47 halftime deficit. ODU connected on 58 per cent of their shots in the second half as compared to 36 per cent by the Rams. Harry Noble was the chief nemesis as he canned 28 points, his career high.

Wilkins was charged with his third foul with 13:09 left in the first half but nevertheless scored 21 points in the opening stanza. He got his fourth with 14:03 left in the game and missed better than five minutes of action while being saved on the bench for the games latter moments. He managed only six points during the second half, the result of the fouls and a sticky ODU zone defense.

Zone Defense

The zone was used after ODU had little success in handling the Rams with a man-to-man in the first half. The zone effectively cut off VCU's inside scoring game and forced them to bomb away from long range. Don Ross, Keith Lawson, and Odell Pack kept the Rams in the game throughout the second half with some deadly outside shooting from 20 feet and beyond.

The ODU lead reached ninepoints at one stage but was closed to a skimpy two in the last minute of play, largely due to a strong full court press which shook the hometowners into several floor errors. The Rams, unfortunately, completely lost their shooting touch at the end, however, and suffered their first setback since December 9 when they fell to the same ODU team.

Six Rams hit double figures with Wilkins leading the pack with 27. Lawson got 15, Pack a season high 14, and Ross and Charlie Booker 12 apiece. Booker experienced some hard luck shooting, but was a demon on the backboards with 18 pulls. Jabo pulled in 14.

Loyola 121, VCU 99

Pierre Marioneaux, a 6'10" giant for Loyola of New Orleans, at least for a night made the people of Louisiana forget about Pete Maravitch, as he poured in a whopping 53 points in leading Loyola to a 121-99 conquest over VCU, now 7-7 for the season.

The 53 points, coming on 17 of 24 field goals, and 19 of 23 foul shots were easily a season high output against the Rams and nullified another fine individual performance by Jabo Wilkins who led VCU with 27 points and 10 rebounds.

The Rams shot 44 per cent from the floor compared to 51 per cent by Loyola and were outrebounded 58-43. Marioneaux, led the Loyola rebounders with 23. Charlie Booker and Mike Fling helped Wilkins on the boards with 9 pulls apiece.

Jabo Wilkins Stretches for Two Points Leads Rams with 27.4 Average

Booker, at 6'7", VCU's tallest man fouled out with approximately five minutes left giving Marioneaux a freer hand inside. Booker scored 18 points on 8 of 12 from the field. Don Ross was the only other double figure scorer for the Rams with 14.

The Rams have been able to win only one away-from-home contest and are certainly looking forward to this week's three game homestand starting tonight with Virginia State.

Coed cagers open with Old Dominion

By Dora Boswell

The 1970 Girls' Basketball season will officially open at Old Dominion, February 6, with a game that promises to be exciting and fast. With regular practices being held since mid-November, the team has shaped quite well, and is playing with ease under the new rules, which were adopted early in the fall.

According to several spectators, including Coach Charlotte Birendelli, the new rules offer a more exciting and much faster game for the audience, as well as the players. Manager Peggy Ciucci proudly states, "The girls now move faster than the boys," under the appliance of the new rules, and more specifically, the 30-second rule. (This rule states that a girl who cannot move the ball down the court in 30 seconds, must forfeit the ball to the opponents.) Thus the fast break will undoubtedly play an important part in this season's games.

Coach Birendelli optimistically looks for a good season. She is looking forward to the opening game with Old Dominion, because they are a "good team".

The team is composed of quite a few returning players who have been together since their freshman year. They play a smooth game, and they work together well. Some of those returning are: Ann Murphy, Debbie Egan, Ann Carneal, Linda Sheppe, and Nancy Dyke.

Booker suspended; Rams weak for VSC

The Rams will try to snap a two game losing skid tonight in an 8:00 home contest with the Virginia State Trojans.

If a Ram win is to be obtained, it will probably have to be done without the services of their outstanding center, Charlie Booker, who has been at least temporarily suspended from the team for disciplinary reasons.

Virginia State is only 5-11 for the year, but beat Hampden-Sydney 90-61 in their last outing. They are averaging 87.2 points per game.

Brandt to address budget committee

Virginia," he said. "I think they expect that of us."

Had the school received the full $52 million, it would have been able to advance faculty salaries significantly. Now, the administration will have to sit down and "balance it out," Dr. Brandt said.

The president's letter expressed optimism in this area. "The proposed budget," it said, "will accomplish many improvements in our situation. We shall be able to advance faculty salaries — probably providing progress above the national average."

The letter said that throughout the institution, the availability of supplementary funds for increases had enabled VCU in 1969 to pay more in salaries than had been budgeted. The supplementary money came from the governor's Discretionary Fund. However, the 1970-72 state budget recommendations include only a minor sum for the governor's discretionary use.

Governor Godwin announced a 10 per cent increase in classified employees' salaries beginning July 1. That increase did not affect faculty salaries.

The MCV hospital requests were treated separately in the state budget. The recommended level of funding is $19.31 million against the original request of $20.53 million. Dr. Brandt said this represented a "very significant support of this area which is so important to the instructional programs."

Under capital items, the university is to receive $4.05 million for two projects: $2.75 million for the remainder of the Science Building on the academic campus, for which $1.2 million was appropriated in the last biennium, and $1.28 million for the Medical Center. This is broken down to $750,000 for alteration and renovation, $150,000 for major repairs and $380,000 for elevator modernization.

In an unrelated development last week, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare approved the Medical Center's applications for two major construction projects. One is a 15-floor addition to Sanger Hall, the medical education building, and the other is an addition to Tompkins-McCaw Library.

A total of $25 million in state tax fund outlay in Godwin's message recommended for all the state agency outlay. Of this, $17 million would go to educational institutions. VCU alone had asked for $79 million for buildings.

Among building outlays in the original VCU requests were: $4 million for library extension; $3 million for land extension; $21 million for classrooms; $4 million for graduate chemistry and psychology building. At the present time, money for these buildings is not available. The pinch, however, will not
