Reviving Project: A Chinese-American culture exchange project

Yushan Cassie Sun

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarscompass.vcu.edu/uresposters

Part of the Art Practice Commons, Asian Art and Architecture Commons, Chinese Studies Commons, Fashion Design Commons, Fiber, Textile, and Weaving Arts Commons, Fine Arts Commons, Metal and Jewelry Arts Commons, and the Other Arts and Humanities Commons

© The Author(s)

Downloaded from

https://scholarscompass.vcu.edu/uresposters/183

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Undergraduate Research Opportunities Program at VCU Scholars Compass. It has been accepted for inclusion in Undergraduate Research Posters by an authorized administrator of VCU Scholars Compass. For more information, please contact libcompass@vcu.edu.
PanXiu embroidery is a heritage craft listed as an Intangible Cultural Heritage in China. According to the Culture Bureau of Huzhu in Qinghai, China, the first piece of embroidery similar to PanXiu was found in the tomb of Tuyuhun in Dulan, Qinghai, China. It is possible that the stitch was invented before the 4th century.

PanXiu is made only in northern region of Qinghai, China. Strongly bonded with the culture of the Tu minority, the expressive color is co-related with the local textiles and decorative style. Due to the nature of how the piece was made, finished pieces of PanXiu embroidery are very sturdy and stable.

The urbanized world eliminating old craft traditions has been a recurring problem. PanXiu stitching, like other heritage crafts, is in danger of losing the next generation of skilled craftsmen.

In order to revive PanXiu and develop more contemporary art and design using this craft, the Reviving Project has asked fifteen artists to make clothes, accessories, jewelry and art. These artists and designers are working with and inspired by pieces of PanXiu embroidery that was made by traditional Tu craftsmen. The Reviving PanXiu project intends to express the interaction of culture in a contemporary way. The exhibition were hosted both in Richmond, VA, USA and Beijing, China and were held with work shop sessions to teach the audience basic PanXiu techniques. End up with a report-back session in Qinghai to report back to the local crafts men about our results and discussion panels.

In the future, we aim to lead more artists to more culture exchange shows to explore ways to study and promote old disappearing techniques.

Special Thanks:

VCUarts Dean’s International Study Grant
GEO Summer Research Fellowship
HuZhu Bureau of Culture, Qinghai, China
E05 Gallery Space, Beijing, China