

Contributors

STEVEN R. CARTER is an Associate Professor of English at the University of Puerto Rico. He has published extensively on Lorraine Hansberry as well as on other ethnic writers and literatures.

ANGELO A. GIUGLIANO is Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Education at Russell Sage College. He is particularly interested in the adjustment of immigrant children to the public school system.

HELEN MacLAM is an editor for Choice magazine, past president of NAES, and an active scholar in ethnic studies.

JOAN W. SULLIVAN is an assistant professor of English at Morehouse College and serves on the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. She has taught in high school and community college and presents workshops on ethnicity, staff development, writing, and group process.