

Contributors

ROBIN P. CLAIR is a visiting professor at Cleveland State University where she teaches communication courses.

PHYLLIS GRAY-RAY is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology and a Research Sociologist in the Social Science Research Center at Mississippi State University. Her research interests focus on black-white relations, African Americans, racism and criminology.

MONICA JACKSON is a Research Associate with the National Urban League, Inc., in Washington, D.C.

MICHAEL J. MCGOUN is a graduate student at Cleveland State University specializing in interpersonal communication.

ALBERT RAMIREZ is Associate Vice Chancellor of Faculty Affairs at the University of Colorado at Boulder and a member of the Psychology Department faculty. His area of research is ethnic and interracial group relations.

ADOLPH SIMMONS, JR., graduated from South Carolina State College with a major in Sociology. He was Professor Gray-Ray's Research Assistant in the Combination of Institutions Star Search Scholars Program at Mississippi State University during the summer of 1989.

FARRELL J. WEBB is a doctoral candidate in sociology at New York University. His interests include race and ethnic relations, research methodology, and applied statistics.

JAMES H. WILLIAMS is the Dean of the College of Arts at California State Polytechnic University in Pomona where he is on the faculty of the Department of Ethnic and Women's Studies. Williams is on the Executive Council of NAES and the Director of the 1991 Annual Conference.