INVENTOR DEMONSTRATES—Miss Anna M. Doudlah of the Occupational Therapy department exhibits her invention, the coniometer. A student, Connie Revielle watches the demonstration.

Miss Doudlah Gets Coniometer Patent

Miss Anna M. Doudlah, Associate Professor of Occupational Therapy, was granted patent papers January 3 for her invention of a coniometer, a machine determining the degree of joint range in the human body.

Miss Doudlah first started work on the coniometer in 1954 while she was training at Walter Reed Army Training Hospital.

At that time she was having difficulty remembering the various methods of measuring degrees of joint impairment. When she complained to her instructor about this difficulty, she was told to do something about it. She applied for the patent April 23, 1958.

The coniometer can be used by anyone in the field of rehabilitation. Miss Doudlah says she believes it can be used outside the medical profession in fields such as engineering and surveying.

The basic law of the coniometer is the geometric law that all triangles are composed of 180 degrees. A mathematical scale measures the actual limitation of limb movement.

COFFEE AND COOKIES FOR CHORUS—The RPI Choral group was host to the Annual Central All State Choral Festival last week for three days of workshop. It was the first time the group met here. Methodist Convention

Students Attend Mock UN

Seven delegates from RPI attended the seventh annual Methodist Student Movement United Nations Model General Assembly last week end at Randolph-Macon College.

Mary Elizabeth Beadles, Joan Rigney and Ray Carmine represented Austria. Ben Bookout, Dorothy Cobb, Linda Murphy and Lynn Murray were members of the delegation from Ceylon.

Fourteen colleges in Virginia participated in the convention which started Friday afternoon ended Sunday morning. Replacing the actual six committees of the real UN were four Main Committees: the Administration Committee, the Trusteeship Committee, the Special Political Committee, and the Security and Political Committee.

Those resolutions which were approved by the majority of the countries in each committee were sent on to the General Assembly, a meeting of all delegates of all member nations. Strict and realistic rules of procedure were followed. This insured an orderly, professional meeting, superior to a mere general debate on national problems.

Controversial Resolutions Passed

Ceylon, one of the countries represented by RPI, sponsored a successful seven-power disarmament resolution. The resolution requested a "called meeting of all nations of the world, under the chairmanship of the United Arab Republic, to investigate the possibility of removal of armed bases on foreign soil within a three-year period."

Another timely resolution passed was one demanding a referendum to be conducted in Algeria, "organized, controlled and supervised by the United Nations, whereby the Algerian people shall freely determine the destiny of their entire country."

"At one point in the assembly, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and its satellites stormed out of the General Assembly in protest of a resolution condemning its interference in Hungarian affairs. The delegations returned shortly.

In an emergency session of the Security Council and an emergency session of the General Assembly concerning the situation in the Congo, the group dismissed Rejeswar Dayal, current UN rep-

Scholarships Now Available For British Summer Schools

Applications for English-Speaking Union (ESU) scholarships for summer school sessions at four British universities are available in Dean O'Connell's office.

The ESU, which has awarded a scholarship to a Virginia college sophomore or junior for the past several years, will award two scholarships this year. Application deadlines are March 30. Winners will be chosen March 25 by a Richmond committee of ESU from the top six applicants.

Working in cooperation with Oxford, the University of London, Edinburgh and Birmingham, ESU was established to promote international goodwill among all English speaking people.

Stanley Soble, Theater Associate representative, asked President Bradshaw if the opinions of all should be considered in such a vote. Bradshaw replied that when the feelings of the organization represented are known, these feelings should be followed by all means. "But when time is an element, as in the said proposal, you can only vote as you think your club would prefer. After all, they gave to each SGA representative the power to represent them as best they can," he said.

Procedure Correct

When asked of the validity of such a process, Billy Ayers, SGA parliamentary said that he found nothing in the Constitution against such a voting procedure.

"Anyone could have tabled the proposal until the next week, thus allowing time for each member of the student body to discuss it with his representative. No one followed this action; therefore, it was assumed everyone on Council was pleased with the outcome," he said.

Council also reviewed more "last semester" business including parking and relations with VPI extension students.

Council was told that a meeting was held by RPI officials and a committee from Grove Avenue Baptist Church on reciprocal parking arrangements, but that no firm commitment was made.

Brenda Whitehurst, Commercial Art major, asked Council's help in strengthening relations with the VPI extension students, saying that several of them did not know about the Mid-Winters dance.

President Bradshaw said he also wanted better relations with the VPI students, and urged them to send a representative to Council.

ID Cards Unclaimed Day Students Leave

More than 100 student insurance identification cards have not been picked up from the business office, Room 1, Administration Building. The cards, giving policy and listing numbers needed to file a claim, belong to day students. Dorm residents received their cards in the fall from the hostesses and managers.

SGA Considers Petition Opposing Fee Invalid

The Student Government Association said at last Wednesday's meeting any attempt to stop its proposal for a compulsory activities fee is invalid and the circulating petitions are useless.

A petition signed by one-fourth of the full-time student body must be submitted to the president of the Student Council within two weeks following a decision made by Council, according to the SGA constitution.

Council passed the proposal on January 18.

"I personally contacted the student responsible for the drafting of one of the circulating petitions about the "two-week" rule shortly after its appearance," said Jerry Bradshaw, SGA president. "It has now been four weeks since Council passed the proposal and as of yet I have received no signed petitions.

"As far as I am concerned, the proposal business is finished until the administration acts on it," he said.

Council heard a discussion on how members should vote when time is not available to find out the sentiments of the various clubs and organizations represented at the SGA.

It was again noted that the compulsory fee proposal was submitted to Council and voted on in one meeting. This has stimulated some of the criticism.

Stanley Soble, Theater Associate representative, asked President Bradshaw if the opinions of all should be considered in such a vote. Bradshaw replied that when the feelings of the organization represented are known, these feelings should be followed by all means. "But when time is an element, as in the said proposal, you can only vote as you think your club would prefer. After all, they gave to each SGA representative the power to represent them as best they can," he said.

Parking Offenders Threatened

The Administration has announced a crackdown on campus parking violators.

Students who rent campus parking spaces but who persistently park in spaces assigned to others will have their parking privileges canceled, Ernest V. Woodall, Business Manager, said.

Mr. Woodall also said that students who have not rented a space but who park in an assigned area will be fined $2.

Violations have been reported particularly in the Harrison st. lot and in the reserved spaces at 712 West Franklin st., and the alleys behind Monroe Park apartment building, the Science Building and the Library.

Mr. Woodall stressed that all campus parking spaces are on a rental basis only, "although quite a few students seem to think the Harrison st. lot is free for students." Students used the lot without charge last fall while it was being built, he said.

Parking Spaces Rented

The spaces are rented by the Business Office for daytime use for $30 to $40 per year. This entitles no one except the renter to use the space during the daylight session. Evening college students can buy a $2 tag and park anywhere on campus at night. This tag does not permit them daytime parking, however.

A renter must report the license

The Other Side

Several students have been circulating a petition objecting to the method used by Student Council to pass a recommendation for a compulsory activities fee. There appear to be several reasons for the petition.

The unprecedented "rush" method used to pass the resolution has received the most criticism. The three dozen representatives reached their decision without conferences with their clubs about the vote. These three dozen represent 2000 students who would be affected.

A compulsory fee was discussed by the SGA last spring and was not favorably received. Instead a voluntary fee was adopted to see if students would support it. Critics explain that out of 2000 persons only 420 participated; this seems to indicate need for further study, they say.

The SGA with a working capital of about $40,000, which the compulsory activities fee would bring, could plan many events. But critics say that there is no theater, gymnasium or ballroom which could contain all the people who attend RPI. The Mid-Winters dance was held in the Gymnasium, which was packed with only 300 couples. Two thousand couples could not have been accommodated.

This leads to consideration of the attendance at athletic events. Every holder of a fee card should be admitted. For 2,000 season tickets that would be held there are only 600 seats in the Gymnasium. Critics say that the probable defense would be that everyone would not come to every event. Since everyone is not expected to attend, they say, why not let only those who want to attend pay the activities fee.

RPI is a professional school where about 1,500 of the 2,000 full-time students live off campus. Critics say, let those who would benefit from the fee pay for it.

This is the other side to the argument over the compulsory activities fee now being considered by the administration.

Congo Crisis

Unlike college students who tend to pay little attention to current affairs, the delegates to the model United Nations (see story, page 1) held last week were up on recent history. Their demonstration over the death of Patrice Lumumba in the Congo parallels events around the world. This eruption was aggravated by the announcement Monday that six more political prisoners have been slain in Kasai Province. Here is the background on the death of Lumumba.

He was arrested last November and would have been tried for the help he gave to natives of Kasai in destroying the Balubas, their neighbors. He was transferred to prison in Katanga Province in January. He and two others escaped from prison on Friday, Feb. 10. Monday, February 13, President Tshombe of Katanga said Katangese had killed Lumumba and the other two and that they were receiving a reward of $8,000.

Khrushchev demanded that Dag Hammarskjöld be dismissed as Secretary General and that United Nations' troops be withdrawn from the Congo.

To Khrushchev's demands, President Kennedy said, "... it is the duty of the United States ... to defend the Charter of the United Nations by opposing any attempt by any government to intervene unilaterally in the Congo."

From some African and Asian countries, which might have sided with Lumumba demonstrators, have come suggestions for solving Congo problems. President Nkrumah of Ghana asked the United Nations to take a firmer grip on the Congo. The United Arab Republic, Ceylon and Liberia have submitted a resolution which would allow the United Nations to use force to prevent civil war in the Congo.

Tuesday the United Nations adopted the plan sponsored by the United Arab Republic, Ceylon and Liberia. Use of force to restore peace seems unavoidable and is preferable to the chance that the Congo might become another Cuba if left alone.

Dr. Oliver Addresses DE District Meet Today

President Oliver will address the opening meeting of the Distributive Education District meeting at 3 p.m. today. The RPI Junior College Cooperative Retailing Program is acting as host.

Students will put their classroom and job experiences to work in the field of distribution as they participate in contests.

The selection of the district D.E. student of the year will take place in the afternoon. Winners from the district contests will compete in state contests at Roanoke in March.

Robert Maurer and Robert Johnson, RPI cooperative retailing students, will present a sales demonstration for the delegates to judge.

Another feature of the convention will be a booth set up for those students interested in RPI careers in distribution. Projects of the School of Distribution will also be displayed.

Alumni Will Receive Copies of 'Proscript'

Beginning with last week's issue, the PROSCRIPT will be sent to 97 paid members of the RPI Alumni Association.

Concert Scheduled Tonight By the School of Music

The RPI Music School will present a student recital in Circle Hall, Room 206, of the Hibbs Building at 8:30 tonight.

Students will perform works by Purcell, Wagner, Hindemith, Chopin and Delius. Jacqueline Booth, Sandra Hass, Mary Gentry and Walter Pendleton will sing. Keith Eddins and Betsy Cole will play the piano. Charles Ellis will perform on the trumpet, and Douglas Utt will play the trombone.

These appearances in public recitals are required of all Music majors for graduation.

Soprano Jacqueline Booth, a part-time student in Music Education and Soprano Soloist at Tabernacle Baptist Church, will sing Purcell's "An Evening Hymn" and Wagner's "Elizabeth's Prayer" from "Tannhauser".

Sandra Haas, contralto, a sophomore Music Education major, will sing Secchi's "Lungi dal caro" and a spiritual by A. N. Burleigh.

Songs by Legrenzi and Delius will be performed by Mary Gentry, soprano.

Walter Pendleton, tenor and the only male vocalist on the program, will sing the works of Marcello and Arne. Pendleton is a Sophomore Music Education major.

The pianists, Keith Eddins and Betsy Cole, will perform "Nocturne in E Minor" by Chopin and "Feux-Follets" by Phillip.

The trumpeter, Charles Ellis, is also a sophomore Music Education major.

Douglas Utt, trombonist, will do "Sonata for Trombone" by Hindemith.

Drama Department Presents One-Acts

Raymond C. Hodges, director of the Department of Dramatic Arts, announced that 10 one-act plays will be presented by the directing class during the semester.

Dianne Hord and Stanley Soble will direct the first two productions, Thursday, March 16. The plays to be given have not been selected.

"We have planned some interesting plays and methods of production. We are going to present one outdoor production on Friday, May 5, and one play will be presented in the round," Mr. Hodges said. This production will be staged in one of the circular rooms in the Hibbs building.

The 10 students enrolled in Mr. Hodges' class have read at least 50 plays and from these Mr. Hodges selected one for each student.

During the semester the student directors must write one play. Frequently in the past, a student has directed his own play.

The purpose of the class is to teach students how to direct plays.

'Defender' To Be Given March 8-11

"The Defender," the Department of Dramatic Arts' contribution to the Civil War Centennial, will be presented March 8-11 in Shafer Street Playhouse.

James D. Pendleton, English instructor here, wrote about Robert E. Lee's dramatic conflict before reaching a decision on whether he would resign his position as lieutenant colonel in the United States Army to fight for the Confederacy.

Woody Eney, will portray Lee, while Sophomore Susan Shewmake will star as Mary Curtis Lee, his wife.

Other members of the Lee family are Curtis Lee, played by Ed Putze; Ann Lee, by Jean Biddle; and Smith Lee, by Johnny Wilson.

RPI Chorus To Accompany Symphony

The 40-member RPI choral group will be among the 300 voices that will sing with the Richmond Symphony Orchestra Monday at the Mosque in a special choral program.

The RPI group was invited by Edgar Schenkman, director of the Richmond Symphony, along with choruses from Randolph-Macon College, the University of Richmond and the Richmond Choral Society.

Monday night's program will be the second time that the chorus has participated with the symphony. Scheduled on the program for the choral groups is "Symphony of Psalms" by Stravinski which will be sung in Latin and Bach's Cantata number 50, "Now Is the Hope and the Strength."

Green Devils To Play At Pembroke Tonight

The Green Devils travel to North Carolina to play the Pembroke State Teachers College Indians tonight and tomorrow night.

The doubleheader will wind up the season for the Green Devils. The Devils split two games with the Indians last year, winning, 66-61, and losing, 66-59, at the RPI gym. Joe Pugh, 6' 6" center who led the Indians last year with point totals of 22 and 20, plays for Pembroke again this year.

Medicos Defeated

Tuesday, February 14, the Green Devils won their eleventh game, as they trounced the Medical College of Virginia, 84-67, here. Although the Green Devils were in command all the way, MCV kept the game fairly close on the shooting of John Godsey and Ralph Couk who scored 19 and 16 points, respectively.

Doug Loughridge and George Shaheen both had 19 for the Green Devils. Bobby Muse (16), Jimmy Jones (12), and Gene Bourne (10) also hit double figures for RPI.

On Thursday, February 16, the Green Devils lost, 82-66, to Randolph-Macon's Yellow Jackets. It was RPI's eighth defeat.

The Green Devils made it close for the first 10 minutes and led, 19-14, at one time. But Shaheen and Monk Vaughan picked up four fouls each and had to be benched late in the first half.

Randolph-Macon, aided by having the Green Devils' chief scoring and rebounding threats out of the game, then piled up a 42-30 Yellow Jackets' Carl Koenig was the game's high scorer with 34 points.

Vaughan and Muse led the Green Devils scoring with 18 and 15 points.

Betsy Harmon Gets Scholarship

Betsy Harmon, senior Elementary Education major, has received the first award of the Daniel W. and Jayne H. Seward Scholarship—$100 for the spring semester.

The scholarship was founded this fall by Charles H. Seward, a 1958 RPI Business graduate, in honor of his parents.

"Seward is the first graduate who has ever given that much or shown so much interest in that form," Dean O'Connell said. "He hopes to make the scholarship larger in the future."

Betsy is vice president of Student Government Association, and was SGA representative for the Junior class last year.

The scholarship, for seniors only, is awarded on the basis of academic record, financial need and contributions to the school. Seward makes the final choice from the top four applicants. Seward, who is an investment broker in Savannah, Ga., is married to a former RPI Fine Arts student, Martha Lawn.

Juniors may apply after spring vacation for the fall grant.

An awareness of international affairs and of the characterized policies of each country marked this gathering of 100 students. The issues discussed and the resolutions passed harmonized with the measures now being taken in the United Nations.
