

Davison and Weaver Lead Rats

'Exercise' Scheduled For Oct. 25

Melodrama Is Set For Four-Night Run

"Five Finger Exercise," a two-act play by Peter Shaffer, is to be the Drama Department's first major production this year.

It will be presented October 25, 26, 27 and 28 in the Shafer Street Playhouse.

Tickets will be on sale in the Rotunda one week prior to opening. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

"Five Finger Exercise" is a suspenseful play concerning five people. It plays variations on the theme of misunderstood personality and the characters' powerlessness to communicate their emotional needs. Critics have called "Five Finger Exercise" a masterpiece of melodrama.

Starring in this production will be Robert Culver, as Stanley Harrington; Jean Biddle, as Louise; Edwin Putze, as Olive; Iris Berket, as Pamela, and James Davis, as Walter Langer.

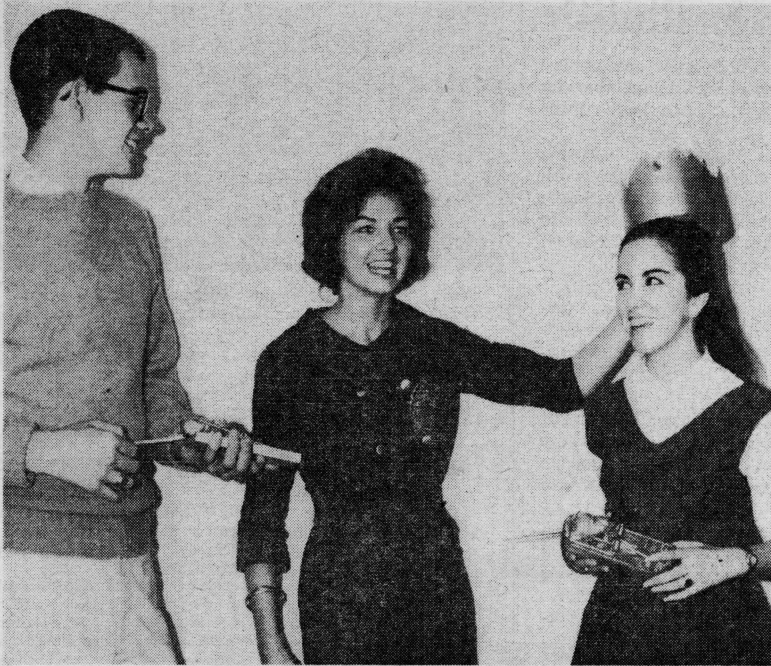

Davis has been seen in many major productions at RPI, including "Look Homeward, Angel," "Plain and Fancy" and "Murder in the Cathedral."

Putze has been seen here in "The Defender," "Plain and Fancy," "Murder in the Cathedral," and others.

Jean Biddle has performed in five major productions, including "Murder in the Cathedral," "Look Homeward, Angel," and "The Defender." Iris Berket was in "Plain and Fancy," and "Murder in the Cathedral."

This will be Culver's first role in a major production.

Raymond Hodges, head of the Drama Department, will direct. Miss Agnes David will do the costuming and Richard Higgins will serve as scene designer and technical director.

Rat Royalty Is Selected At Dance

By Sandra Turner

A future oceanographer and an aspiring actress have been chosen as Mr. and Miss Rat this year.

John Davison of Richmond and Sandra Weaver of Hampton were named Rat King and Queen at the Rat dance in the Gymnasium last Friday night.

Davison lived in Houston, Tex., before coming to Virginia two years ago.

An Applied Science major, Davison became interested in oceanography when he started skin diving at Block Island, R. I., five years ago. Davison explained that an oceanographer is a person who charts the ocean floor. He is a member of the Undersea Explorers' Club in Richmond.

Davison said, "Rat Week was a lot of fun, and those who didn't participate missed out on a lot."

Sandra, a Drama major, has appeared on television, community theater productions and in the circus.

She has played various roles in the introduction to Shock Theater, which has been video-taped from a Hampton station for the past two years. Sandra has played everything from a witch to a moon-maid.

Beauty Contestant

Sandra is a member of the National Thespian Society and once received the organization's Most Valuable Contribution to Drama award. She tied for fourth place in the Miss Hampton Roads contest with a reading, "Judgment Day."

While staying with an aunt in North Carolina, Sandra spent three months with the Billy Smart Circus

Business School Director

Dr. Roach Is Serious About Job

By Patti Jo Absher

An opportunity for professional challenge and a return to Virginia and life-long friends were the incentives which brought Dr. J. Kenneth Roach to RPI as director of the School of Business.

A genuine concern with the growth and quality of RPI as a college mark Dr. Roach's serious attitudes concerning his administrative position, which was vacated last summer by Dr. Kenneth E. Zimmer.

The school's basic problem, Dr. Roach believes, is "to retain our basic philosophy, which permits students to get immediate experience in their field while supplementing their income, and at the same time to integrate the increasing number of transfer students into the system."

Liberal Arts Background

An increased number of students entering with a liberal arts background calling for curriculum changes has prompted Dr. Roach to begin a series of changes in the Business School's courses and programs of study.

"Departmentalization will become the first significant change and is already in progress," said Dr. Roach, "for it puts the faculty in closer contact with the students and the curriculum."

Dr. Roach stated he also intends to change the school's graduate program, with emphasis on enlargement. At present it is limited to Business Education.

The new director comes here with a wide background in college teaching and business administration. After earning his doctorate in Education from New York University, BA from Duke University and MA from Columbia University, he spent 20 years as an associate professor of economics at Mary Washington College.

After leaving Mary Washington, Dr. Roach went to the University of Georgia, where for the past four years he has served as chairman of the school's Business Education department and as director of the National Program of Family fi-

Pat Story Is Elected New SGA Treasurer

Pat Story, a sophomore Drama major, was elected treasurer of the Student Government Association at last Wednesday night's meeting.

In other action, council voted to purchase a portable public address system, made plans for Openings dance, heard a report of the Dance Band Club and discussed publicity policies.

Pat, a 19-year-old SGA representative of the Theater Associates, was one of the two candidates for treasurer nominated from the floor. Eugene Arrington, a Retailing major from Roanoke was the other candidate.

The office of treasurer was vacated this summer by Orriss Burnett, former Business major from Petersburg, in a letter of resignation to council. Burnett's resignation made any of the five sophomores seated in council eligible for the office.

North Carolina Native

In assuming the duties of her office, Pat, a native of Mt. Gilead,

N. C., will be chairman of the Scholarship Drive, the Finance committee and custodian of the Student Activities Fund.

Council approved purchase of a $250, portable public address sys-

College Responsibilities

Fall inevitably finds the college campus again filled with both the returning upperclassmen and the new freshmen who are coming in contact with the life of the college for the first time.

For both of these groups this return should cause an affirmation or reaffirmation of some principles which make it clear to every one exactly what his role in the college is. The responsible student is no longer able to ask the question, "Do you have a job?" with the reply, "No, I go to school," rather, for all of us the reply must be, "Yes, I am a student."

Studentship is our job for the four years, and perhaps longer, in which the college is the site our residence, and the privilege, not right, of being here demands in return the very best of our efforts in every facet of our lives. The most important aspect of this, of course, is academic activities—it is incumbent upon us to make the most of every possible facility the college offers us, not with the idea of obtaining enough credits for graduation, but with that of educating ourselves to be leaders in the community and the world.

Unfortunately, most college students have the idea that the penetrating light of their probing minds should be directed solely at their major subject and the courses dependent on it. Our thinking tends to be much too provincial as we proceed through the marvelous opportunity of association with excellent minds for four years. Rather than merely absorbing our academic work, we should be doing our best as responsible students to put it to practical advantage—college, after all, is the place to form a workable philosophy of life.

This means not only for academics, but a vital understanding of world affairs, government, religion (that is, serious religion), and every other thing that means we, as the college, have accepted everything human as the province of our concern. Responsible studentship is no easy task; it is something that we have to work at and be conscious of at all times, or we will find ourselves falling back into mere absorption again. Yet it is something that is so necessary that each of us needs to judge our mental activity in terms of it every day of our lives in college.

tem when it voted to spend $50 from the SGA treasury toward the purchase price.

Remaining funds for the two-speaker system will come in $50 donations from each of the classes. It will be bought soon and will be available to all organizations within the SGA.

Rob Reline, a senior in Interior Design, was named chairman of the committee for Openings, the first major dance of the year.

Openings Music

Council is considering hiring the VPI Collegiates to play for openings. The Duke Ambassadors, Council's first choice, were eliminated because they wanted $1,100 to play. A letter of invitation has been sent to the Collegiates.

Openings, which is scheduled for November 4, is semi-formal and tickets will be $2 a person, with the exception of Dance Club members. Guest bids will be available.

Membership in the Dance Band Club was reported at 333 by President Scott. Approximately $2,644 has been collected. Total figures will be compiled today at the end of the membership drive.

President Scott also announced that publicity signs posted on campus must be of regulation size. The publicity committee will specify the size of official signs to be posted on all bulletin boards, except the one in front of the Registrar's Office.

This bulletin board is to be used for students' personal notices, Scott said, and no personal notices are to be put up on any other boards.

Hillel Club Will Hold First Meeting Sunday

The Hillel Club will hold its first meeting at 4 p.m. Sunday at Beth Ahabah. There will be an executive meeting Wednesday at Beth El.

Susan Van Pool Met Famous Director Otto Preminger
 She Had Summer Job in Filming of "Advise and Consent"

Susan Van Pool

Coed Knows Famous Hollywood Producer

By Linda Murphy

An RPI coed worked with the famous director Otto Preminger during the shooting of "Advise and Consent" this summer.

She is Susan Van Pool, and she was nothing less than the stand-in for Swedish actress Inga Swenson.

At the end of that week, she turned down an offer to stay on and be an extra to come back here and study Fashion Illustration.

"I'm not exactly the actress type," she explained.

The attractive red head hails from Chevy Chase, Md. This summer she heard that the casting director was coming to interview aspiring walk-ons at the Sheraton hotel in Washington, D.C.

"I applied for an extra walk on part," she said, "and got it."

Stand-in

Susie happily accepted the offer to be Inga Swenson's stand-in. The 20-year-old sophomore sat behind the cameras and watched Miss Swenson rehearse.

Then Susie did Miss Swenson's part slowly so the crewmen could get the lighting and sound set up and adjusted to her.

"It was hard work," Susie emphasizes.

For one thing, she didn't know from one day to the next whether she would be working the next day and her average day found her on the set at 7:45 a.m. where she worked until 12:30 or 1 p.m.

Then, Preminger treated the entire cast to lunch at the Shoreham. He took them there for dinner, too, when they worked late.

"Late," Susie said, was 6 or 7 p.m.

Hard Taskmaster

Preminger was a hard taskmaster, she noted. He is notoriously for his "Hurry up and wait" manner of running the cast.

"He shouts his head off," she explained, "but you just have to sit there and take it. It's him and not you, so you don't feel so bad." She added that nobody really minds, however, because Preminger is such a fabulous director.

Susie recalls that Preminger once turned on a reporter and yelled: "I don't care if you're from the press! You're visible! Get out of here!"

The RPI actress was besieged by newspapermen and autograph hounds while on the set. With children, the big thing was quantity in autographs, and "newspapermen were disinterested when they found out I plan to be a 'starving artist.'"

One of the big thrills of her job was meeting Allen Drury, author of "Advise and Consent." He was very considerate and didn't object when the movie was changed from the book in places. "He's a typical neighbor and looks like an author," she noted.

She also met Peter Lawford and his wife, the former Pat Kennedy. Lew Ayres, Walter Pidgeon, Paul Ford (the general on Sergeant Bilko) and Don Murray were there, too.

Susie, called "Reggie" by her friends, remembers some of the funnier things that happened. One scene had to be shot over because a prop man had fallen asleep and his snores had been recorded on the tape.

One of the "more tender" moments occurred when the stage crew flipped a coin to see who would kill a goldfish that had to float upside down in the fountain.

Of her week with the Hollywood greats, Susie said "It was fabulous."

Fourteen One-Act Productions Planned by Drama Department

Fourteen one-act productions are being presented by the Drama Department this semester as part of its workshop program.

This program, consisting of two one-act plays, will be presented every Thursday evening for two shows, one at 7:30 and another at 8:30. These productions will take place in the Little Theater at 910 West Franklin st. There will be no performances during the running of major productions.

The plays will be staged by members of the Drama Department's directing class. Acting parts are open to any person taking drama or speech classes at RPI.

A list for the semester—excluding last night's productions, "The Tiny Closet" and "Lord Byron's Love Letter,"—is:

- Oct. 12 "The Marriage Proposal"
- "Aria da Capo"
- Nov. 2 "Escape By Moonlight"
- "Spreading the News"
- Nov. 9 "Trifles"
- "The Still Alarm"
- Nov. 16 "The Sandbox"
- "A Trap Is a Small Place"
- Dec. 14 "Let There Be Farce"
- "The Hero of Santa Marie"
- Jan. 11 "In a Grove"
- "Helena's Husband"

Coed Meets Irrescent Poster Lion

By Carol Barger

Did you ever open the door to your room and look eye to eye with a lion?

Last night I opened my door, flipped on the light and screamed. Hanging on the wall was a huge, iridescent poster of a lion advertising the Clyde Beatty circus.

As I walked into the room I saw balloons hanging from the ceiling and more posters. I didn't mind. I just chalked it up to dormitory life and sat down to study.

I was writing a letter home when suddenly six girls appeared. I didn't mind. I chalked it up to dormitory life and invited in the girls, who had so graciously decorated my room.

She Didn't Mind

I didn't actually mind when they decorated my room. I didn't actually mind when they interrupted my letter writing. I didn't actually mind when they started making coffee and eating my cookies. I didn't actually mind when they smoked all of my cigarettes.

I just chalked it up to dormitory life and let them enjoy themselves.

When they left at three in the morning, the room was full of dirty coffee cups; I had a letter to write, a chapter of history to read, an eight o'clock class and an iridescent poster of a lion.

Dormitory life? Sure it's great to have friends and food and fun, but who wants to look at an iridescent lion all night?

from England. There she learned the basics of the trampoline, rope maneuvering and trapeze. She also worked with a lion trainer.

She said, "I am very honored to have been chosen as Miss Rat. It came so unexpectedly."

Margaret Zeigler, Junior class president, said:

"Everyone who participated in Rat Week enjoyed it. The freshmen told me they met a lot of people they wouldn't have met, if there hadn't been a Rat Week. The dance was a tremendous success, thanks to the neighborhood merchants, who sponsored the semi-formal event."

Delayed for Practice

Intramurals Begin Monday

Coach J. S. Timberlake announced Tuesday that the intramural badminton tournament will be postponed until 4 p.m. Monday.

The tournament, which was scheduled to start last Monday, was re-scheduled to allow the participants to get in a week of practice.

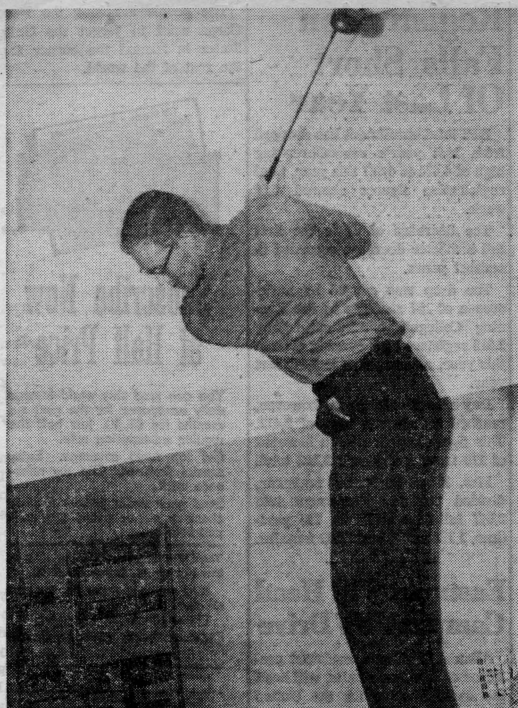

The single elimination affair, drew a total of 52 players—26 in the women's tourney.

Coach Timberlake, last year's winner in the mens' tourney, will not play this year. Dagmar Gomez, last year's winner in the women's tourney, drew a first round bye in this year's play.

The large increase of participants in this year's tournament is attributed to the fact that more students have become acquainted with the game. Last year was the first time that badminton was organized intramural program at RPI.

Badminton will be followed by basketball in a continuation of the enlarged intramural program designed to fill the athletic needs of RPI students—no matter what type of sport he prefers. Plans are also underway for a bridge tournament to be held once a month in the Rotunda.

Golf Team Is Hoping Fall Practice Will Help

RPI's golf team is following the lead of the women's tennis team by practicing this fall.

Coach Timberlake said this would enable him to give members more individual attention and that the players would be in better form this spring. He said the team will probably play several matches this fall with the Medical College of Virginia.

The team practices every Friday at the Meadowbrooke Country Club. Coach Timberlake emphasized that it is still not too late to come out for the team.

The RPI team was handicapped last year by the lack of practice and lack of tournament experience, said Coach Timberlake. "We hope to overcome this problem by practicing a lot more and by scheduling matches this fall," he added.

There are three sophomores and one senior returning from last year's squad, which posted a 1-6 record in its first year as a varsity sport. The sophomores are Paul Barksdale, Bob Cather, Charles VanNatta, and the senior member of the quartet is Robert Brydon.

Brydon, a Business major from Richmond, played the number one position for the Green Devils last year. Coach Timberlake said that he is an exceptionally good driver.

Barksdale, a sophomore Engineering student, played the number three position last year. He is regarded by Coach Timberlake as potentially the best golfer on the team. He is now shooting consistently below 75.

Cather, a General Business major from Richmond, is another returnee who is expected to help the team considerably. Coach Timberlake said that Cather is the best competitor on the team, and as soon as he gets confidence in his wood shots he will be a fine player.

VanNatta, a sophomore Engineering student from Richmond, shot in the low 80's last year, his first year in tournament competition.

Coach Timberlake said his team has "brains and brawns." Robert Brydon is a good example of the brains and brawns type, for he made all A's last semester.

Unless what we do is useful, glory is vain.

Berkley H. Shepherd, Campus Policeman, Dies of Heart Attack

Berkley H. Shepherd, former RPI campus policeman, died last Friday at a local hospital. He had been a member of the campus force since Sept. 1, 1960.

A business office spokesman said Mr. Shepherd died of a heart attack. He had suffered a previous attack this summer and had recently returned to work.

Shepherd, 54, had been active in police work for some time, being attached to a national detective agency and the State Penitentiary before coming to RPI.

Surviving Mr. Shepherd are four sisters and a brother.

Registration Falls Short Of Last Year

RPI total enrollment has dropped from last year's record-breaking high of 4,674 to 4,627 this year, final registration figures showed this week.

The decrease of 47 is the first fall semester decrease recorded in several years.

The drop was caused by a decrease of 157 students in the Evening College's enrollment. Only 2,215 registered for evening classes this year, as compared to 2,372 last year.

Day school enrollment, however, reached an all-time high of 2,412. This figure represents an increase of 110 from last year's 2,302 total.

Mrs. Ethel B. Riebe, registrar, divided the day enrollment into 2,047 full-time students, 365 part-time, 1,192 males and 1,229 females.

Eastman Will Head Campus UGF Drive

Allan A. Eastman, assistant professor of Arts and Crafts, will head the campus drive for the United Givers Fund, which will start October 10 and continue through November 8.

New Hostess Cites Problems Of Dorm Life

By Alberta Lindsey

Being mother to 21 modern co-eds living in a new mid-Victorian dormitory has its problems, says Mrs. Anne Baker Seward, hostess of the new women's dormitory at 928 Park ave.

Light sockets which don't work, single rooms being shared by two girls, a lack of enough window screens, only one telephone, second hand living-room furniture and no public address system are all part of the everyday life of the residents of the new dorm.

"The way the girls' voices echo through the building, we really have no need for a P.A.," laughs Mrs. Seward.

The building, which was formally a boarding house, is unusual as compared to the other dormitories. There are prism-cut glass lights over the front door, marble mantles in the living-room and the original tile is still around the fire place.

The transformation of the house began September 1, and Mrs. Seward expects it to be completed by Christmas. In decorating, she is trying to stay within the style of the building.

This is Mrs. Seward's first year as a dormitory hostess, and she says, "I just love it."

Grandmother of three children and a native of Surry Courthouse, Mrs. Seward attended Longwood College. Then she returned to Surry and taught for one year in a one-room school.

Flower arranging and reading rate highly with her. Books about the Old and New Testaments are her favorites. "I plan to do some reading about the Civil War this year," she adds.

Pam Richardson Elected Interdorm Council President

Four candidates for the Women's Interdormitory Council offices were unopposed and elected unanimously.

Pam Richardson was elected president of the council.

Also elected were Theresa Shepard, vice-president; Terry Freeman, secretary; and Mary Ann Finley, SGA representative. The latter office is temporary, for the council said it may decide to send a representative from each house instead of one from Interdorm.

Pam, president of Meredith House, is an Elementary Education major from Spartanburg, S.C. Theresa, a Founder's Hall resident, is majoring in Occupational Therapy. Her home is Decatur, Ga. Terry is from Bennettsville, S. C., and she is a Commercial Art major and president of Ritter-Hickok Dormitory.

Mary Ann, president of Lee House, is a Fashion Illustration major from Falls Church.
