Graduate Program In OT Planned

By Linda Murphy

Acting this summer to steer RPI in its first months as an independent college, the Board of Visitors has:

- (1) Elected officers
- (2) Appointed committees
- (3) Instituted a new graduate program in Occupational Therapy
- (4) Revised the graduate program in business.

In the last official meeting of the Board on September 5, the board decided to institute a graduate program in Occupational Therapy. Previously, there has been only post-degree work available. The new program will offer a Master of Science in Occupational Therapy.

It was also decided to revise the graduate program in the School of Business. A Master of Science in Business Education degree is offered now, but the expanded program will open the fields of Business Administration and Accounting to a Master of Science degree in Business.

Need Approval

Both these programs depend upon approval from the State Council of Higher Education and the regional accrediting agency, the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. In all probability, the programs will not go into effect this year. Dr. Oliver has stated that students may be

Thefts Reported In Men's Dorm

A series of thefts in the men's dormitory at 312 North Shafer St. was reported during the school year's first week.

Dean McDougall said the thefts included two cameras—one of them valued at more than $300—and other personal items.

Preliminary investigations tended to indicate that outsiders entered the dormitory and took the items.

As preliminary measures, additional locks are being installed and student residents were warned to be wary of strangers.

Roach and Johnston Fill Dean Positions

Pendleton Goes Back To Teaching

By James Lawler

Two new appointments to RPI's administrative staff, one for a newly created office, became effective July 1.

Dr. J. Kenneth Roach, former director of the School of Business, was appointed the new Dean of the College, and Russell A. Johnston, former assistant professor of business, was promoted to Dean of Students. Johnston replaced James D. Pendleton who resigned the post to return to the English department as an assistant professor.

Although new to RPI, the office of Dean of the College is commonplace in other institutions. "With RPI going on its on, obviously, this was an office that had to be established," Dr. Roach said.

Basically, work of the new office will center around three areas, faculty, instruction and academic regulations. Policies determining academic standards for students to remain in school and rules governing probation will be established from this office, Dr. Roach said.

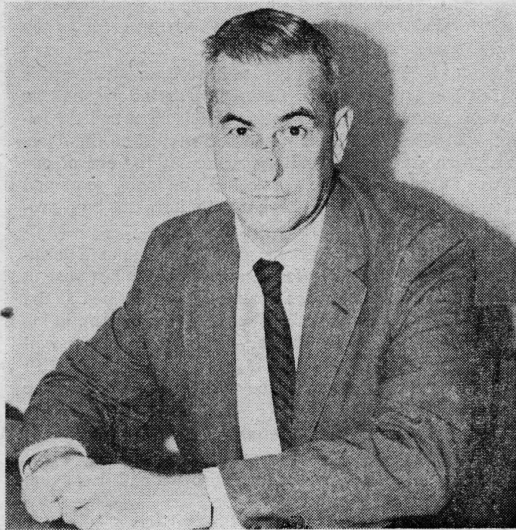

Receives Other Offices

Before the new office was created, the Director of Admissions, the Dean of Students and the Registrar took on extra areas of work which would normally be associated with an academic dean. "Their work included areas over and above the normal function of their office," Dr. Roach said.

Dr. Roach, a native of upstate New York, came to RPI last September from the University of Georgia where he served as chairman of the business education program and director of the family finance program.

Dr. Roach received his A.B. degree from Duke University, M.A. from Columbia University and

Science Renovation Progress Reported

Work is about 25 per cent completed on the $563,000 east-wing addition and renovation of the RPI Science Building in the 800 block of Park ave.

Business Manager Ernest V. Woodall said this week that the foundation and walls of the addition—one of five current projects to expand the college's physical plant—have been completed.

Funds for construction of the addition and renovation of the Science Building came from an appropriation by the General Assembly.

The other four expansion projects are major renovations and improvements to two buildings, the purchase of a third building and the leasing of another.

The larger of the renovation and improvement projects was to the Shafer Street Playhouse. This structure—completely renovated—now has a control center behind its stage, refinished floors, full-length bulletin boards to cover its

Registration Reaches 4,586; May Top 61-62

This year's enrollment may exceed the 1961 figure after late registration is completed today, according to Mrs. Ethel B. Riebe, registrar.

Thus far this year's figure is 4,586 as compared with total registration last fall of 4,655.

Full-time day students enrolled are 2,114—an increase of 102 over last year's 2,012. The number of part-time day students registered is 345, while 416 were enrolled a year ago.

At the end of the four-day registration period for the Evening College, 2,127 persons had enrolled. The figure is expected to be boosted by late registration held this week.

Melvin E. Fuller, director of the Evening College, said this year's regular enrollment figure is 254 more than last year's regular enrollment of 1,873. These figures do not include late registration.

Mrs. Riebe said that the lists used in place of class cards "helped to move registration along much faster." This is the first year class cards have not been used in day school registering.

A breakdown of the number of men and women students and the total count of each class was not immediately available.

Where Are the Locks?

A few random observations regarding changes or a lack of changes on campus seem to be in order as the Fall semester gets under way.

One change, which was to have been effective this fall, has not been made. Last spring dormitory students were promised by the Student Government and the administration that locks would be installed on the doors of each student's dormitory room. At the end of one week of classes, there are no locks on many doors and where there are locks, keys usually have not been provided.

In view of last weekend's thefts in the men's dormitory at 312 North Shafer st. and the thefts last year in women's dormitories, we are somewhat alarmed at the prospect that a student's belongings are not safe in his room. Whether the thievery is internal or external seems to be irrelevant at this point. Certainly, we wish locks were not necessary; they will be a minor nuisance despite their value.

On the other hand, students should be protected when it is evident that they are in danger of loss. Steps should be taken immediately to provide both locks and keys.

There have been two changes in registration procedure. The absence of class cards to be filled out for each class in which a student enrolls is a welcome relief.

The new identification cards required by the administration seem to have potential value. They will not be transferable and there will be little question of mistaken identity on campus.

Off campus, it is probable that the cards will be helpful to students who seek to cash checks, establish credit or prove their identity to the satisfaction of local merchants.

Another small but helpful change is in the form of a pamphlet issued by the Slater System and which is available in the cafeteria. The pamphlet considerably introduces Freshman to the cafeteria, lists the hours at which meals are served and speaks comforting words about the staff. Over the past years students had to guess, consult crystal balls, or figure out mathematically with the aid, perhaps of sundials, just when meals would be served.

The only item in the pamphlet which seems a bit ludicrous, but which may be necessary to good advertising, is the picture of the congenial chef bending over his piping hot goodies, which are referred to as his "artistry." Now we wonder, having eaten here for several years, if the food in the cafeteria is the result of any "artistry," but having been told so in the pamphlet, we hope the Slater System will back up its advertising.

side walls and a ceiling that reflects light.

The other sizable renovation project was the installation of a fire-proof stairway in the School of Social Work at 800 West Franklin st.

The building purchased by the college is at 930 Park ave., and it will be used by the School of Applied Social Science to alleviate problems created by the Science Building renovation.

Chemistry laboratory classes will be held in this building, which cost $20,000.

The last of the five projects was the leasing of a building at 922 W. Franklin st. to provide additional dormitory facilities for 25 coeds.

A native of New Jersey, Dr. Jeffrey received his BS degree from RPI, his MS degree from VPI and his PhD from the Medical College of Virginia. His fields of concentration are physical therapy, biochemistry and nutrition and anatomy.

A former part-time instructor in the School of Distribution will join the RPI faculty as an assistant professor in distribution. She is Vivien King Ely, who has a BS degree in education from East Tennessee State College. She has also done graduate study at the University of Southern California and Purdue University.

Three additions have been made to the School of Social Work. They are Mary Lee Haskins and Robert E. Kelley, assistant professors, and Marta Korwin, associate professor.

Miss Haskins holds a BA degree from St. Joseph's College and a MSW degree from the National Catholic School of Social Service, Catholic University. She did extensive casework in Connecticut and Baltimore before joining the RPI faculty.

Mr. Kelley, who was born in Massachusetts, received his BA and MSW degrees from the University of Washington in Seattle. Since graduation from the University of Washington, Mr. Kelley has served in a variety of capacities in the field of social work.

A native of Wilno, Poland, Miss Korwin is presently a British citizen, but she has applied for United States citizenship. She holds a Certificate in Social Science and Administration from the London School of Economics and Political Science, a BSW from the University of Toronto and a MSW in Psychiatric Social Work from the University of Pennsylvania School of Social Work.

Miss Korwin is a candidate for the PhD degree at the National Catholic School of Social Service, Catholic University.

By Tom Weedon

That big smile athletic director Ed Allen is wearing these days might well be attributed to the group of athletes here this year.

Although Coach Allen is not predicting a championship for either his basketball or baseball team, he did say, "We did pretty well this year in the talent department for not giving any grants-in-aid or scholarships."

That smile grows larger when Mr. Allen looks at his cage prospects. George Shaheen, who as a freshman two years ago was a second-team selection on the all-Little Eight honor squad, is back to team with Bobby Muse, who was the state's second leading scorer last year. Veteran guard Jimmy Jones again will do the playmaking, and there's Tommy Walsh, a standout high school performer for the 1959 Thomas Jefferson team, and Mike McDonough, who made such a fine impression as a freshman two seasons ago.

A nucleus from last year's baseball team which went through a thorough rebuilding job is also returning. One wouldn't normally get excited over a team which won only five games out of 18; however, five of those games were lost by a total of nine runs so there's good reason to be optimistic for the coming season.

Strong Contender

Here's one prediction for the coming season: the Green Devils have long been the doormats of the Little Eight but this year it will be a different story. With a few breaks here and there, the Green Devils might win both crowns. Certainly a strong first-division club is possible and even probable.

While RPI will definitely be an improved club, other Little Eight teams also appear to be stronger—particularly Randolph-Macon. It is rumored that the Yellow-Jackets have gone on another armed service recruiting mission to add to their already strong basketball team.

Old Dominion College (formerly Norfolk William and Mary) has enrolled four baseball players from Hampton Roads Post 31, which finished fourth in the nation in the American Legion World and apparatus in the first grade and fending Little Eight titlists.

Although Coach Allen is not overly optimistic, (few coaches

Paintings and drawings by Nell Blaine, 1941 graduate of RPI, are on display at the Mason Bliss Gallery of Richmond. The exhibition will continue until October 10.

Miss Blaine received fellowships from the Virginia Museum in 1943 and 1946, enabling her to study in New York with Hans Hofmann and at the Jane Street Gallery. In 1944 she became the youngest member of the American Abstract Artists.

After working as a teacher, painter and designer for several years, Miss Blaine toured and studied in Europe. In 1957 and 1958 she won scholarships to MacDowell Colony and Yaddo, artists' retreats.

Miss Blaine has exhibited in Europe at the Festival of Two Worlds in Italy and in a traveling exhibit including Paris, Rome, Munich and Copenhagen. This was sponsored by the Department of State.

Her present show includes several Greek subjects painted by Miss Blaine while she was on the Greek island of Mykonos three years ago.

Dave McGill, a 1958 graduate of RPI and an assistant director of the Young Men's Christian Association, will be director of intramurals here beginning October 1. McGill will be assisted by George Shaheen and Tommy Walsh.

All PE Majors Not Tomboys, Says Coach Nancy Alexander

By Pat Warren

"Girls, if you have a short haircut, wear little lipstick, and have any muscles at all . . . watch out! You might be mistaken for a Physical Education major," says Miss Nancy Alexander, assistant professor of Physical Education.

"This description burns me up. Why do people always think of P.E. majors as rough, masculine 'tomboys'?" asks Miss Alexander.

"The most feminine girls on campus could be the star of the varsity basketball team, and a girl who has a tailored look could be a Drama, Art or even a Fashion major. People tend to classify others by appearance rather than personality," she points out.

The reason some girls are called "tomboys," as Miss Alexander sees it, is because those girls compete with males rather than females—for lack of female competition. Girls want to win a game badly, but they rarely want to win as badly as boys. "That's the basic difference between men and women. Males tend to be more aggressive and females, more subdued. When a girl does play sports aggressively, she is called a 'tomboy,'" says Miss Alexander.

As a possible solution to the problem, Miss Alexander cited the Swedish recreation program. "In Sweden girls begin with tumbling apparatus in the first grade and continue to play sports throughout high school. In this way, both boys and girls can enjoy a sports program, and girls don't need to worry about being called "tomboys," she said.

Miss Alexander, a graduate of the College of William and Mary with an AB in Fine Arts, came to RPI in 1956. At William and Mary she had been outstanding in basketball and tennis. She taught physical education at Newport News High School and at Douglas Freeman High, in Henrico County.

Upon her arrival at RPI, she converted a small varsity sports program to a more extensive schedule. The girls' basketball slate then consisted of two games, with only two practice sessions for the season. One tennis match completed the varsity program. Basketball practice will get under way in a few weeks. Coach Alexander urges that any girl, short or long-haired, lipstick or no lipstick, join the fun.

Prize-Winners

Two One-Act Plays Planned in October

Two one-act plays which won the Drama department's nationwide playwrighting contest will be premiered here October 5 and 6.

Raymond Hodges, department head, announced the dates this week in disclosing production plans for the newly renovated Shafer Street Playhouse for the entire 1962-63 season.

"The Harrowing of Hell," written by Warren Kiewer of the English faculty of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., won first place in the contest conducted last year. It will be directed by department instructor Thomas R. Long.

"Autumn Unawares" by Mrs. Marion Robinson of the Goucher College faculty, won second prize in the contest, which was judged by playwright-novelist Betty Smith. It will be directed by Robert Cliver, a graduate student.

Mr. Hodges announced that Eugene O'Neill's moving "Long Day's Journey into the Night" will be presented in the playhouse October 24-27. Mr. Hodges will direct the O'Neill's play.

The next major production will be of the Broadway musical "Bye Bye Birdie," on December 5, 6, and 7. Later, Moliere's "The Mizer," "Cave Dwellers" by William Saroyan will be presented.

Weekly presentations of one-act plays also will begin soon, at the Studio Theater, 908 West Franklin st. The 7:30 p.m. presentations are open to the public.

Rat Week to Begin Monday, After A Successful Orientation

By Nolan Kegley

The trap is set to spring on all Rats beginning Monday. Freshmen who survived the first week of classes will participate in annual Rat Week, September 24 through 29.

Since September 9 freshmen students have been arriving here. In an effort to familiarize new students with the rules of the college, the Freshman Advisory Board had 50 volunteer upperclassmen lead groups of about 15 to 20 freshman students during orientation week. The leaders stayed with a specific group throughout the week to explain rules, conduct tours of the campus and help the students enroll.

Students who arrived last week were treated to a jazz concert, a picnic, and a dance. Tommy Mitchell, a Junior psychology major, led his quartet for a concert given in the Rotunda, Monday, September 10. The freshmen attended a picnic Wednesday afternoon sponsored by the Junior class.

Saturday Sock Hop

The Thunderbirds, a local combo, provided music for the sock-hop held Saturday night, September 15. Bill Buskell Junior class president, said the dance was one of the most successful ever held here. More than 300 persons attended.

In addition to the extra-curricular activities last week, new students met with department directors, took English, business and Math placement tests and registered for classes.

After a week of classes, freshmen will attain the status of "Rats."

Rats are usually small furry, four-legged animals that wreak havoc where they are found. Next week the rodent world will be more chaotic than usual. Rats will be at the beck and call of Juniors and will be summoned into court if any serious breeches of a few simple rules occur.

Rat Caps

Rats at RPI are exceptional because they must wear green and yellow Rat caps. Also, every Rat will have a sign at least 25 square inches hanging around his neck. The sign will contain such important information as the Rat's name, address, major subject, age, height, weight, and home town.

RPI Rats are all pack-rats at heart. They carry such items as two kinds of cigarettes and matches, chewing gum, a rat trap (set), cheese, an egg, and most important, a confederate flag.

Rats must be able to recite a definition of a Rat and know the purpose of the Honor Code. To gain entrance to the cafeteria a rat must give a Rebel Yell, followed by "Hi Ya'll."

Rat Court

And Woe Unto any Rat who violates any rule laid down by the Rat Court. Rat Court will be held daily at noon on Shafer Court. Rat Court will be presided over by the officers of the Junior Class: Bill Buskell, president; Chris Faile, vice president; Sue Gordy, treasurer; Deedee Knox, secretary and Ed Bradshaw, SGA representative. The officers will be aided by five other members of the Junior Class: Tom Slaudeker, Commercial Art Major; Glen Thomas, Social Science Major; Shirley Critzer, Distribution; Terry Parker, Retailing, and Joe Bricker, General Education.

But every Rat has his day and Friday will be the RPI Rat's nemesis. Friday is turn-about day when the Freshman Rat Court holds sway. The Rats who have been the best sports during Rat week will form the Freshman Rat Court.

A Rat Dance will close out Rat Week, Saturday night, September 29. The dance is held each year to honor Mr. and Miss Rat of the Freshman class. Mr. and Miss Rat will be selected on the merits of their participation and sportsmanship during the week.

The "Speeks," a frequent entertaining group here, will play for the dance.
