Gangs are run like businesses. Women are attracted to aggressive men (my being men in woman can be sexed in, bate in, or blessed in). Family is a woman and a man who commits a crime together.

Walker-Barnes, Chanequa J., and Craig A. Mason. "Perceptions Of Risk Factors For Female Gang Involvement Among African American And Females Are Getting A Piece Of The Power Above!

From equality in voting to equality in violence and it is more interesting to see a violent woman than initiations.

From uptownmagazine.com

I attempted to find evidence that females were breaking gender roles by being involved in gangs. I found evidence that suggested that violent females are considerably out of society norms. Most people do not consider females when they think about a gang member, yet it is presumed that they make up 10% of active gang members. However, due to the lack of thorough research, none of the data that I have found is absolutely confident in their numbers. Females join gangs for the same reasons male do, however, unlike male gang members female gang members “main concern [has] less to do with status and reputation, and more to do with innovative ways to make a living and survives in a bleak environment with no legitimate opportunities to make money and a weak support system (Karen p. 150).”

One study that found of the girls interviewed, 80% of them said it was a way to make money that absolutely confidet their numbers. These woman are taking initiative so that they can take care of themselves and their families.

CONCLUSION

Woman are taking initiative to make their own money and protect themselves instead of waiting on a man to do it. Gangs offer them this in a sense. Although, gangs might not be the most positive way, young girls seeing other woman in power offers a type of role model for young girls in broken homes and communities. Woman have/are fighting for equality in the work force, politics, sports voting rights. Now they are literally fighting equality in all things including violence.
