Debrah Sickler-Voigt is an Assistant Professor of Art Education at Middle Tennessee State University. Her research interests include children with at-risk tendencies, community based art education, Southern folk artists, and Visual Culture Art Education. Her writing on these subjects has appeared in Journal of Art Education and Journal of Cultural Research in Art Education. She has presented at numerous regional, state, and national conferences. In addition, she serves as the NAEA News columnist for the Caucus of Social Theory in Art Education and is the Tennessee Art Education Association Student Chapter Advisor. She became a professor so that she could mold pre-service teachers into effective instructors and assist current teachers in bettering their teaching practices. Through authentic instruction and research in art education, she teaches art educators how to use art as a tool to make a significant difference in children’s lives.

Jason Wallin is a Ph.D provisional candidate in the Department of Secondary Education. His current research interests include the social construction of childhood, visual arts research and, psychoanalytic implications of pedagogy.

Garnell E. Washington is a visiting assistant professor of art education at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He has an array of diverse teaching experiences and a long record of varied performance work. His current research focuses on performance art and the social education of at-risk youth.

Alice Wexler is an Associate Professor of Art Education at the State University of New York at New Paltz. She received an Ed.D at Teachers College, Columbia University. Her research interests are in special education and Outsider Art. She is working on a research project with the Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies in 2008.

Linda Wheeldon: Loving performance, improvisation and chaos, Linda most often wishes she were a jazz singer working with a really hot band or in New York City having just been offered a great part in a play. But for now she is a Doctoral Candidate in Education (Counselling) at the University of South Australia, on faculty at Acadia University teaching in the B.Ed and M.Ed (Counselling) programs. She is also a Psychotherapist in private clinical practice.
Contributors

Terry Barrett is a Professor of Art Education at Ohio State University. He holds M.A. and Ph.D degrees from Ohio State University in Art Education with a concentration in Photography. He is the author of Criticizing Photographs, of Criticizing Art: Understanding the Contemporary, of Talking about Student Art, Criticizing Art: Understanding the Contemporary, Interpreting Art: Reflecting, Wondering, and Responding and the editor of a volume entitled Lessons for Teaching Art Criticism. He has also served as the senior editor of the research journal, Studies in Art Education. Professor Barrett has been a Visiting Scholar to The Getty Educational Institute for the Arts in Los Angeles, CA and a Visiting Scholar of Education at the Center for Creative Photography in Tucson, Arizona. Correspondence can be addressed to barrett.8@osu.edu.

Barbara Bickel, M.A, is an artist, arts-based researcher, and ritual performance practitioner; she is currently a doctoral student in Art Education at The University of British Columbia, researching on religious pluralism in a grassroots woman’s spiritual group. For further information see her website www.barbarabickel.ca

Valora Blackson is a doctoral student in Black Studies, Ohio State University.

Miriam Cooley is an assistant professor of Art Education in the Faculty of Education at the University of Alberta. Painting and drawing were her first passion, although her current artistic work is in photography, film, and video. Her research interests include visual culture, creative process(es), and the dynamics of artistic production as research.

Vicki Daiello is a doctoral student in the Department of Art Education, Ohio State University.

Dennis Fehr was born in Texas (strike one) but when he was 10 days old his parents moved him north and he got a second chance. But he was born into a sect known as Mechanized Amish—lots of black clothes and praying (strike two). He sensed even as a small boy that he was in the wrong situation, so when he was seventeen he moved to a different state and lived on his own thereafter (home run). This childhood gave Dennis an enormous advantage in that it drove him to become a social theorist (another home run). His work focuses on making a kinder world.
David Gall joined Western Michigan University in 2004 as Assistant Professor in Art Education. He held a similar post at Cleveland State University before moving to WMU. A Fulbright scholarship allowed him to earn his Ph.D from Penn State University in 1996. Born in Barbados he studied in India where, as a recipient of a Government of India scholarship, he completed BFA and MFA programs majoring in painting, the former at the Visva Bharati University – founded by the first non-Western Nobel Prize poet Rabindranath Tagore, the latter at the Maharaja Sahajirao University of Baroda. His professor at Baroda was K. G. Subramanyan, well-known artist and writer on art. As a practicing artist David’s work has been included in shows of Caribbean Art, notably the 1996 – 97 Caribbean Visions, an exhibition of Caribbean Art that toured the U.S, and in 1991 L’Espace Carpo, Caribbean Art exhibition in France. As an educator his interests are in multicultural and related issues, educational philosophy, and curriculum theory. In Barbados he was a founding member of AICA Southern Caribbean and has published articles delivered at conferences held by that body. He has also published articles on Barbadian art and artists, and on art education in art educational journals.

Megan Goffos is a Masters in Policy and Arts Administration, President, Arts Priori at The Ohio State University.

Gayle Gorman is a Ph.D candidate in the Department of Secondary Education at the University of Alberta, working in the areas of Art Education and Media Studies. She received her MFA in Photography from the University of Buffalo, New York, her MA in Studio Art from the University of Minnesota at Duluth, and her BA in Cinema from Binghamton University, New York. She has worked as a freelance photographer, a photo researcher, a film series programmer, and an adjunct university lecturer, teaching Photography, Digital Imaging, and Design courses, as well as Photography workshops for a community-based arts center. She worked full-time as a high school art teacher, teaching a wide variety of Art classes, including Media Studies for which she developed her own curriculum. A working video artist as well, her current research interests are in psychoanalysis and issues of the posthuman.

Jan Jagodzinski is a professor of visual art and media, University of Alberta, Dept. of Secondary Education, Canada. Primary interests are theoretical with a focus on Lacanian psychoanalysis. He is on the advisory council of the several journals in education (Journal of Curriculum Theorizing, Studies in Art Education) and psychoanalysis (Journal of Curriculum Theorizing, Psychoanalysis, Culture & Society, Journal
Michelle Kraft is an Associate Professor of Art Education at Lubbock Christian University in Lubbock, Texas. Her research interests include art theory and pedagogy and inclusion practices in the art class. She has served on the editorial board of Visual Arts Research, Trends (published by the Texas Art Education Association), and Visual Culture and Gender. Her writings include journal articles in Art Education, Journal for Cultural Theory in Art Education, and Visual Arts Research. She has presented at conferences at the local, state, and national levels. Michelle received her Ph.D. from Texas Tech University.

R. Michael Fisher, Ph.D, is an artist and education consultant. He is currently interested in researching the impact of the culture of fear and its impact on learning, as well he is writing about autonomous learning sites and spiritual politics in adult transformative education. For further information see his website www.feareducation.com

Michelle Forrest's first career was as a singer of opera, oratorio and lieder. Having taught language arts and drama (secondary) she is now an Assistant Professor in the Education Department at Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax, NS. She teaches Language Arts and Philosophy of Education and writes about the role of the arts and aesthetics in teaching values.

Karen Frostig, Ph.D, is a visual artist, community activist, and art educator, deeply engaged with ideas concerning visual culture, critical theory and feminist discourse. Dr. Frostig is an Assistant Professor in the Graduate School of Social Sciences at Lesley University and coordinator for the Community Partnership Program. She is also a research associate at the Hadassah-Brandeis Institute. A recent recipient of a Puffin Foundation grant, she is pursuing research in fields of study representing memory, violence and voice. Dr. Frostig also publishes articles in Art New England and Art Therapy; and with Michelle Essex, co-authored the book, Expressive Arts Therapies in Schools, 1998. She also exhibits her work nationally. Dr. Frostig earned her PhD in Visual Culture, Critical Theory and Artistic Practice from the Union Institute and University, 2002; M. Ed in Art Therapy from Lesley University, 1976; and B. F. A. in Painting from Massachusetts College of Art, 1970.
Wanda B. Knight, Ph.D, is an Assistant Professor of Art Education at the Pennsylvania State University. Her extensive work in the field of art education spans more than two decades. She has served as a principal of several public schools and has taught all grade levels across the K-12 spectrum, overseas, and in vastly different regions of the United States, including communities serving rural, suburban, and urban populations. Her teaching, academic, and research explorations in visual culture, cultural studies, and multicultural education (within a framework of power, politics, and dominance) mirror her pragmatic experience and quest for equity and social justice. As past chair of NAEA's Committee on Multi-ethnic Concerns, Dr. Knight has published manuscripts and reviews in leading journals and presented numerous papers at local, state, national, and international conferences.

Alice Pennisi is an assistant professor of art education at Buffalo State College. She earned her doctorate in art education at Teachers College, Columbia University. Her research interests center on decentralized teaching and adolescent dis/engagement in schools. Her dissertation work focused on the development of a classroom negotiating curricular model as a means to re/engage students in art and societal issues.

Therese Quinn is an Assistant Professor of Art Education at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, where she teaches graduate and undergraduate courses and directs the BFA with Emphasis in Art Education Program, which prepares undergraduates for certification. She also works with the Chicago Teachers for Social Justice (www.teachersforjustice.org), and, with William Ayers, co-edits the Teachers College Press series, Teaching for Social Justice. She welcomes questions and comments at tquinn@artic.edu.

James Haywood Rolling, Jr. earned his Ed.D and Ed.M in art education at Teachers College, Columbia University, his M.F.A. in studio arts research at Syracuse University. Dr. Rolling has held a number of administrative and teaching positions in elementary schools, most recently serving as a visual arts teacher for Kindergarten through Fourth grade at The School at Columbia University, a new elementary school espousing a fully integrated curriculum, in addition to working as an adjunct faculty member at New York University and Teachers College. Rolling has published articles, essays, and book reviews in peer-reviewed journals such as Qualitative Inquiry and the Journal of Curriculum Studies, and serves on the review panel of Art Education, the Journal of the National Art Education Association. Dr. Rolling is currently an Assistant Professor of Art Education at The Pennsylvania State University.